Do you have general comments about the scope of Washington's updated wolf conservation and management plan?

Wolves are a part of the Pacific Northwest ecosystem now. However like all predators they require strict management to prevent overpopulation and thereby damage to prey populations, livestock producers livelihoods, and negative human-predator interactions. Opening hunting of wolves in the state of Washington will allow wildlife managers the ability to keep wolf populations in check and for WDFW to produce more revenue off the sale of wolf tags.
