Do you have general comments about the scope of Washington's updated wolf conservation and management plan?

I am concerned that there has not been enough education and awareness by livestock producers. There have been very successful developments in wolf/livestock conflicts in other states. It does require livestock producers put in some time, effort and some money. I do not have a lot of sympathy for the "good old boy" mind set of I'm not changing anything, just kill the wolves. They have land leases that are very cost effective. Part of any new lease agreement should be proof that they have employed multiple techniques to mitigate wolf/livestock conflicts. Lethal measures should never be used unless they have acted responsibly.
