Do you have general comments about the scope of Washington's updated wolf conservation and management plan?

I have worked with wolves in Minnesota for more than 20 years, science based education, and working on conflict resolution is important for this process to be successful. Quieting the extremists in the mix, do not let them hijack the process. Looking at prevention of conflict, and protecting the existence of wolves and other wildlife on public lands is important. Reach out to those who are living with wolves and ask for help to move your work forward. At the core, wolves are not the issue, people are the issue and you have to work with the people to be successful. I see that you are struggling be real about why and how to move forward bringing everyone along.
