Do you have general comments about the scope of Washington's updated wolf conservation and management plan?

The wolf conservation and management plan was a good first effort toward recovery of wolf populations in Washington State. It is critical that the gains made during the recovery phase now be sustained through the development of a strong new wolf plan for our state. It is hoped that lessons learned (what worked well what did not) can be thoroughly evaluated via respectful, crucial conversations amongst all stakeholders. The new plan forward must define a path of coexistence for our wolf populations.
