

destiny reimers

M.ovi is already existing in the wild populations in alaska and its stupid to make people test their sheep and goats for it. This is over-regulating the farming industry and there really is no need to be testing for it because wild populations would probably never encounter domestic ones and the dep. of environmental conservation is just being big push-overs and using fear-mongering to try to get there way. plus its way too expensive. thank you.