Greeting,

I'm reaching out today to voice my concerns regarding the current regulations regarding testing for Mycoplasma ovipneumoniae in domestic sheep and goats.

For the health and well-being of both wild Caprinae and residents of Alaska it would be in the State's best interest to require testing for all domestic sheep and goats prior to import into Alaska through an AAVLD accredited diagnostic laboratories, as well as, adding M. Ovi to the Reportable Disease List and requiring same-day reporting.

Thank you for your time and consideration,

Todd Granberry
