As a small farm trying to import mini-Jersey milk cows for starting a grade-A dairy operation, I understand how complicated and expensive the current importation of livestock already is. This new regulation, unless all of the farmer's expenses were paid by and out of ADEC budget, would make it completely impractical to import new bloodlines and genetics. Thus leading to more line breeding / inbreeding and the overall harm this breeding would cause to the animals. If you are unsure of the short and long term harmful effects of inbreeding, please email me, you have my email address as it was required to post this comment, and I will give you both my opinion and documented scientific articles on the topic (ofcourse you can look those up yourself if you desire).

Thank you for your time and attention. May Jesus, the Christ, bless you and guide you.
