

Gerrit Bruhaug

Modern micro reactor designs are a perfect fit for Alaska and the permitting of such machines should be speed up to allow for Alaskans to rapidly get access to low cost, reliable, zero carbon power. Due to the small source term and ultra safe designs being built, micro reactors can have essentially zero emergency planning zones and be based inside of towns or buildings they are serving. This is ideal for Alaska and its many small towns.