

Alan Medsker

Nuclear fission micro reactors are perfectly suited for many locations in Alaska, especially those that currently rely on diesel generators which pollute and are expensive to run. The sooner we can begin deploying micro reactors to replace them, and to add more electric capacity, the sooner we will see improved health and economics, and more livable places.