

Robert Cress

There are multiple type of nuclear reactors for power or heat generation. The Micro-reactor is one in which its electrical generating usage in remote sites makes substantial sense to me. I support it. The spent fuel radiation half life issue for uranium based reactors is completely valid. The catastrophic disasters at Three Mile, Chernobyl, and Fukushima occurred in reactors designed more than 50 years ago.

That said I encourage you research the efficacy of Thorium based reactors.