

Cheryl Ongtawasruk

Micronuclear reactors are not what Alaska needs. The beauty of our wilderness is one of the many aspects of this state that all can agree is what makes Alaska great. To have the potential of nuclear waste polluting out already changing climate is not worth the benefits. This could also pollute the wildlife, which many in rural Alaska depend on to survive.

With concerns about higher cancer rates among indigenous people, adding toxic nuclear waste disposal that could contribute to existing health concerns is ridiculous.

Please protect our state and constituents by creating opportunities to use cleaner energy that is built for Alaskan environments.