We are a residential unit. We have 2 compost bins we use to compost our food waste. We also use the recycle bin that Minneapolis provides for things like corn cobs which would not decompose in our bins. What we do feels like small potatoes.

Can you please mandate all the restaurants to separate their waste and send their compost waste to a central location where it would be composted? Or have it collected? I realize it would require the cooperation of people who don't give a s--t if they would have to pay employees to do this.

We have created a generation that only cares for their own financial gain.
