

Miriam Gingold

We have environmental standards for precisely those times when companies or individuals or the government itself want to make exceptions (such as via enactment of a site specific framework). Standards mean little if our watchdogs want to bend the rules. Doing this would increase bad government opportunities... monied influence, favoritism, white supremacy power over marginalized people. Please keep teeth in and strengthen our standards.....don't whittle them down to serve special interests.