

alek roslik

Once these waters are degraded, they can never be brought back to their original state. The wild rice waters in Minnesota are a unique ecosystem and cannot be replicated elsewhere.

If you are going to change the sulfate standards it should only be to make them more strict.