

Amalia Esparza

These are all great documents with various amounts of information. I see all sorts of comments at the end about holding individuals responsible. However, I fail to see any sort of other plans to keep BIG corporations who dump run off waste. Is there any sort of committees in place and or policies in place to hold these factories and or places creating run off from farming to change their practices? According to this report, they contributed the majority of PFAS in our bodies of water. How about all the pesticides being placed by the state DNR in our parks etc.? These all affect our reservoirs. Taking action to clean up is great, but we need more intervention at state level making it a crime to contaminate our lakes and rivers for future generations. I will be actively taking a look at the resources provided on how I can involve myself further.