MPCA. It is your job to protect and control the waters of MN. It is your duty to set standards so our waters are not polluted by individuals or industry, currently it is the mining industry in question. The standards you set must PROTECT and CONTROL our water. After all, it is your water too. Mining Companies are going to want to dump sulfate wastes in them because it costs far less money than for them to redo their systems. The MPCA is the guardian of our water. So it is very obvious that you must set the sulfate limits high enough so that anyone or any company, even mining companies cannot pollute them. If you don't, the mining companies will continue to destroy them as they already are. Do your magic and stop mining pollution.
