

Marv Nysetvold

It appears the document seeks to clarify the roles of the different agencies, which is commendable. However, when we experienced a large fish kill on Lake Shetek last spring (2023), no agencies had a plan to assist with any of the clean up and individuals had to expend a lot of time and resources to clean up the tons of dead fish. The DNR manages the fish in the state lakes and should have an action plan for when there are large "non-urgent" fish kills to address the issue in a timely manner. I don't see any reference to any actions the DNR will take other than helping with investigating an incident.