

Diane Bublitz

I support changes to the permits required for the spreading of manure from large feedlots. It makes sense that the operators of feedlots take responsibility for safely disposing of the waste products of their business. We need to protect our ground water from the sources of pollution. It is much less expensive to keep pollution out of our water than to remove it once the water is polluted. These regulations put the responsibility for protecting ground water where it belongs, on the businesses that cause the pollution.