I am horrified to hear that US Steel would even think to ask for a permit variance to discharge more than twice the volume of process water than what has been determined to be the limit that the waterways can absorb. Why do we go through the exercise of trying to determine a healthy limit if politics and money get to push the override button? Please don't let US Steel exceed the limits which have been set by technical staff who know what they are doing! Thank you for considering denial of the variance request.
