

Stephanie Hemphill

I support MPCA's plan to include sulfate limits in Keetac permits. The agency has been very patient with U.S. Steel over the years. The sulfate standard has been in Minnesota law for fifty years! The company doesn't need more time to figure out how to cut its pollution. U.S. Steel has a history of proposing so-called solutions and then changing its mind. U.S. Steel is a rich company. It's time to insist that it stop polluting Minnesota's waters. That includes groundwater, as we know how groundwater can mix with surface water. Thank you, MPCA, for enforcing the law.