

Brian Anderson

I am extremely disappointed the MPCA is attempting to implement a sulfate standard with no scientific backing. With bottled water having up to ten times the suggested standard, this does not make any sense.

I am concerned potential treatment of the discharge water, to meet the standard, will cause adverse effects downstream, due to removal of necessary nutrients from the water.