I normally don't do this type of thing, but this is very important to the range. I feel I'm being lied again by the state of Minnesota. As a duck hunter, I know that wild rice crops are different from year to year. It has more to do with water levels than any made up standard you provide. I hunt the Bemidji/Cass Lake area, not a mine in sight, yet each year the rice is different. Stop lying to the people who actually use the land.
