How are we supposed to have a functional society if both people and companies just leave their trash laying around, especially in these potentially dangerous locations. Ford did its business and made its money, but now we need to act like adults and pick up the mess that was made. Completely pick it up. Not just some "mostly cleaned" plan. I want to see a plan that involves a complete cleanup of this area.

If a housekeeper "mostly cleaned" the house, or if a janitor "mostly cleaned" up a school, they would get in trouble. We cannot "mostly clean" up this area. We need to entirely clean up this area.

If is literally the least we could do for not only for the local ecosystem, not only for every city that sits down stream from St. Paul on the Mississippi, but also for the future generations who will live in this area.
