

Peg Honkomp

Being an organic home Gardner for over 50 years I know the importance of toxins, water health, and animal health! All affect my environment and what is done farther from my home DOES have affects locally.

The potential for overcrowding and disease is tremendous especially on a project this size. Open a separate farm somewhere else-they don't because it would cost the company more and lower profits all with no concern for the actual animals and the environment. We can and should do better for our State and health of our extended communities.

Thank you.
