I have worked closely with Riverview in Chippewa County for several years both by growing forage crops and helping on a harvest crew during silage harvest. Riverview has quickly become one of the most trusted names in our community and have continually showed that they are committed to being good stewards of our resources. Soils are tested before manure application, local wells are monitored for water quality, and their people are continually working with both the local community and state officials to follow the rules and be good neighbors.

The economic possibilities it has brought to our farm have allowed another generation of farmers to flourish, all while going above and beyond the highest levels of environmental stewardship. I fully support their business as a whole including the expansion at West River and I am confident they will comply with all regulations required.
