I live in Stevens county. I grew up here and live in the farm my grandfather grew up on in this county. Our farm is near an existing riverside operation just across the border into Traverse County and we have learned that Riverview is also trying to expand another operation by our farm in addition to this one. I am concerned about how this operation will impact our water in this community, both quality and quantity. We have already had to start testing our water on our farm because the well that I drank from as a kid is now contaminated. The information presented in this EAW does not reassure me that Riverview will do what it needs to do to protect our water in Stevens county. The information provided in the EAW about water, even after the aquifer test that was initially left out was added, is outdated and insufficient. An EIS must be required. It is the only way to get the information that my self and my community need to feel this project can go forward safely.
