

I am writing to express my strong support for the Riverview Dairy expansion project. I have had the opportunity to work alongside Riverview for the past ten years, and during that time I've come to know not just their operations, but also the people and values behind them.

One of the things that stands out most is their commitment to local communities. Their construction projects consistently use local contractors, creating dependable work for small businesses and skilled workers who truly rely on these opportunities in rural areas. The impact of that kind of investment is both real and lasting.

I have also seen how Riverview works with neighboring farmers. Their partnerships for supplemental feed and manure fertilizer programs create strong, mutually beneficial relationships that support local agriculture as a whole. They are not just operating in these communities—they are actively contributing to their success.

Riverview's care for the land and their facilities is another reason I support this project. They take pride in doing things the right way, and it shows. Their operations are well managed and thoughtfully maintained, to the point that other dairy producers often look to them as an example of how things should be done.

What has impressed me most over the years, though, is how much they value people. That mindset is clear from leadership all the way through their teams, and it extends beyond their organization into the communities they are part of. They treat people with respect and genuinely care about doing right by others.

Projects like this expansion are important for rural communities. They bring jobs, economic growth, and long-term stability to areas that need it. From what I have seen over the past decade, Riverview approaches that responsibility with care and integrity.

For all of these reasons, I strongly support the Riverview Dairy expansion project and respectfully encourage its approval. I am confident it will continue to reflect the same standards and values I have consistently seen over the years.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
