To whom it may concern,

I am writing to dissuade the use of an EIS with regards to the expansion of Riverview in Stevens County. I, as an experienced dairy consultant in the Upper Midwest, have visited several Riverview sites and found them to be clean, professional, and committed to producing nutritious milk products while also being good stewards of the land. Going through the EIS process will be an expensive and time-consuming waste of resources and only stand to harm dairy product consumers. From my observations, Riverview is an excellent boon to the rural communities of Minnesota and beyond.

I am asking that you do not proceed down the EIS pathway and instead follow normal environmental assessment processes with regards to dairies.

Sincerely,
Crystal Prom, PhD
