I am a Rabbinical Kosher Supervisor for the Midwest area that oversees many different facilities involved in kosher production. Part of doing so requires very close involvement in the inner workings of each facility. River View Farms makes kosher supervision a pleasant experience thanks to their professional, cooperative team and well-organized, sanitary facilities, among many other reasons. Their production is done with the highest level of sophistication, from simply being an organized, well-done affair to their highly environmentally conscious policies. They efficiently milk their cows while strictly maintaining very humane conduct, showing their impressive ability to efficiently get a job done with integrity. In a similar vein, River View Farms maintain an impressive level of cleanliness in their buildings, which directly coincides with the absence of the unpleasant odor that is commonly present in milk farms. Simply put, their environmental impact is minimal to practically non-existent. As a kosher supervisor for the entire Midwest, River View Farms is an excellent asset to the farming industry; that only improves that market when expanded.
