

Peter Louwagie

Living my entire life in the dairy industry i have seen tremendous growth in farm size and we are getting to the point of industrialization not farming. At the proposed size of this dairy I believe there are many things that could result in a disaster along the line of the large dairy in Texas suffering a fire on killed the majority of the cows and had a effect on the national milk supply. There is many possibilities of biosecurity going wrong with the scope of an operation this size and causing a disruption of the short shelf life of diary products.

Concentrating this size of operation in one location i believe is not good for the people of Minnesota. A strong viable dairy industry is i believe very important to this state.

As the industry farm operations increase to industrial size maybe the state legislature has to consider in spending public dollars on research and promotion a worth while invastment