

Lindsay Henkemeyer

Factory farms go against everything the Minnesotan people and communities stand for. They believe in community, environment, health and wellbeing. Large scale factory farms are terrible for environment, animals, and surrounding family farms - family farming is what our agriculture is built on and we need to do better in making it easier for small farms family farms to keep their land, to grow, to thrive. When they thrive we thrive. No one wants a creepy sad industrial farm in our beautiful state.