

Susan Darley-Hill

This project begs extreme scrutiny for the potential of many and varied negative impacts it will most certainly have on traditional, smaller scale farming operations, on appropriate land use, on water supply (sucking up a staggering volume) and pollution from soil runoff and massively excessive manure handling and spreading/disposal of giant amounts of waste. This is not the kind of industrial farming that benefits anyone other than the corporation that reaps profits at the expense of everyone who seeks a safe water supply, healthy soil, an environment undiminished by overuse, pollution, and a safe food supply. Allowing this kind of operation exhibits an utter disregard for families seeking a fair shake in the agricultural economy.