We are a neighboring resident only a few miles to the West of the West River Dairy. When they put that first dairy in, our well water started with black silt in the water. We ended up having to dig a brand new well. If they put that many more dairy cows in, that is going to take more water than it is already and more land to get rid of the manure, also we should worry about run off into our streams and lakes. I am not in favor of the expansion.
