Good afternoon! I'm submitting a second comment because my earlier response was incorrect; the data center in Pine Island plans to spread 5.2 million gallons/year of bio solids on nearby fields. The annual water usage itself will be much more, which will put demand on this system. How will this bio solid spreading impact the local rustypatch bumblebee and the monarch populations? A new wastewater treatment facility for Pine Island, Zumbrota, Goodhue, and Wanamingo is not necessarily a bad thing, but it needs to be done right with all the information from everyone involved. Thanks again for doing your due diligence before proceeding with this development!
