

Jessica Stone

We need to be realistic with what we can do to reach our goals to prevent the worst implications of climate change. We are inhaling the smoke from a fire not too far away from us. We are living in a drought. We are facing serious health issues for ourselves and our children.