

Daniel Rowan

I do not support the clean car rules. You are mandating changes at the cost of the taxpayer. The last time that I checked, we already can't afford food, housing, and energy. It is the responsibility of the government to ensure that these resources are available to its citizens. What you would like to do is burden the already burdened with this unknown and unwanted policy that is being forced on the public by the executive order of our governor, who believes that she can run New Mexico by executive order. The transition to EVs needs to be done in stages, as the resources for batteries and systems to charge them simply do not exist yet. The resources of one fully electric vehicle can make 7 hybrids. Your policies hurt the most vulnerable of our state and push the middle class closer to poverty. You would do well to consult people who actually know something about business, climate, and economics before you push this policy. The Albuquerque Journal editorial board has summarized how flawed and even insane these policies are and lucky for you we are the worst in the country for reading, so chances are not many people read that article. It would almost seem that your goal is to keep NM last in every good measure and at the top for the worst. How about we get the people in our state to read proficiently before we force mandates that will ruin our economy and make our housing situation even more dire?

https://www.abqjournal.com/opinion/proposed-ev-charger-mandates-will-make-abqs-housing-crisis-worse/article_7b17175e-5d8c-11ee-8014-93af7d3dbb12.html

<https://imprimis.hillsdale.edu/thinking-smartly-about-climate-change/>

<https://dcjournal.com/12-steps-to-make-the-world-a-better-place/>

https://www.abqjournal.com/opinion/editorials/span-class-print-trim-editorial-span-unfunded-ev-charger-mandates-would-be-a-buzzkill-on/article_745a1b90-5e1e-11ee-b2c3-d783314e026d.html