

Eddie Cantrell

I feel trying to catchup with California is a mistake. We are not a population dense state like California. While the majority of our population is in 3 metro areas. After that we are spread out and our focus is rural communities that live up to the value and ideas that our New Mexican culture is built upon. My friend asked "where would you charge it out here?" My answer is the politicians need to figure that out before forcing everyone to buy electric cars.