I am a farmer in San Antonio NM. I raise alfalfa, wheat, and sorghum hay that is delivered to many ranches and feed stores within the state. We use diesel trucks to accomplish this task, our state is not ready to start using electric units. Electric units need charging stations that are not on line yet and our electrical grid is not ready to supply what would be needed. I also raise beef for individuals that like to have fresh meat these animals need to be delivered to the processor in a timely manner it takes power (like diesel trucks) and reliable vehicles to do this. Thank you for allowing me to comment.
