

Geoffrey Danielson

I don't see how increasing the load on our already crumbling streets with heavier EVs and our already challenged power grid is going to do anything but make things worse for average road and power users.

This is typically poor command economics. EVs will be economical when the infrastructure can support it, not when we've legislatively demanded they be the bulk of the cars sold here.