

Leah Miller

We read that Project Jupiter will use as much gas as the city of Albuquerque, but emit greenhouse gases equal to Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Las Cruces combined. This looks like carelessness and haste on the part of the developers. I don't think you should trust them.

And how come you're not also looking at water - that massive tank will eventually need to be flushed, what then? And have they covered the possibility of leaks in the "closed loop"?