

Judith Phillips

Insuring that workers have access to clean drinking water, breaks in shaded/cooled spaces, early start times for outdoor workers whenever possible, training to recognize/prevent dehydration and heat related illness, and other best practices to protect workers seems a less expensive way to support business expenses long-term.