

Seth Dolph

This proposed regulation is the epitome of ridiculous government. Our state is consistently number one in every bad statistic and number fifty in good, precisely because of this sort of mindset. I have worked my entire adult life outdoors in all sorts of adverse conditions. I never needed my boss to give me seventy five percent of the day off. It's pretty easy to get acclimated to the heat if you don't run to the nearest air conditioner. Taking long breaks to cool off doesn't allow your body to deal with it. Proper hydration is essential along with some common sense. All that this sort of silly regulation will accomplish is to exacerbate this state's lazy, welfare culture and drive out more opportunity for those of us stupid enough to think we ought to work for our daily bread. Keep in mind that not long ago, people in this state and hotter, lived and worked with no air conditioning. The true problem is a lack of common sense.