

Jan Novak

This is only common decency. Besides, workers that are not under heat stress should be better, more productive workers, which is good for both the workers and their employers.