I am commenting in wholehearted support of the proposed regulation. As someone who works a very physical job here in NM, including multiple hours inside a metal trailer with no air circulation on a daily basis, heat illness is a serious risk for well over half the year. My coworkers and I try very hard to keep an eye on each other to the extent that management is willing to allow it, but our options are limited when there is an issue. The proposed prevention regulation would be an incredible boon.
