

Carol Trujillo-Fay

I taught in APS for four years and heat illness is a serious issue that requires serious action. My classroom would easily hit 85 degrees by 11 AM in the morning in September despite filling my classroom with fans I purchased from my own bank account. My students were lethargic and would get sick to their stomachs with the heat. If one is cooking, one is not learning. Personal safety is paramount.