This is the most absurd proposal I have ever seen.

I am a surveyor and civil engineer I have one office employee and I do the field work by myself self.

Very seldom do I have field work that lasts more than two non consecutive days and usually last about 4 to 6 hours. Your proposal would require me to make a 12 hour session to accomplish 4 hours of work.

Roswell is almost always above the 90 degree threshold. I don't usually work outside the rest of the time so I would have to spend several days working outside not doing any productive work getting acclimated to do my field work. Along with setting up a cooling station for a temporary work site that may be from a few hundred yards to several miles from the cooling station. This has no basis as I have been surveying in NM for over 40 years and have never have a heat related event.
