

Stephen Yemm

When a good worker dies, a new one must be hired and trained. Therefore, protecting every worker from heat related illness and death is a good business decision. It is the same spirit behind OSHA; protecting workers from hazards benefits everyone.