

Christopher Kelly

This ruling entirely depends upon what circumstances are being referenced. Being in a burning building in full turnout gear for 15 minutes is a long time (plus, one's air tends to run out...), and requires some recovery. Still, not everyone does what a structural firefighter does, and even then it is just one part of the job. So, weighing in one way or the other on this proposal is meaningless without some illustration of the specific circumstances which are under discussion.