

Michael mcniel

While I am a huge supporter of employees health and safety, this one has me wondering, why? 80 degrees seems very excessive. If that number was applied world wide and this rule implemented what effect would this have on food, lumber, production, and most importantly an employees ability to provide for himself and dependents. This potential rule goes above and beyond an employers call to protect employees, and it creates a hardship for businesses and employees.