

Richard Diver

These proposed rules will add nothing to worker safety, but will significantly add to the cost of doing business.

How about providing information and best practices information to employers and employees and letting the people doing the work determine what is best for them?